PCP THIRTY YEARS LATER

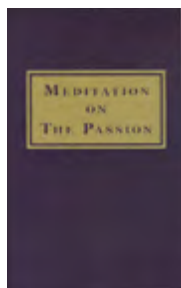

Dear Friends of PCP,

This year, 2013, marks the thirtieth year since the two founders of the future Preserving Christian Publications visited a friend in New York state, who had just bought a house a short distance from Auriesville, the Shrine of the North American Martyrs. Between the two of them they had only $200. They were both former seminarians, with no certainty as to how they were to support themselves. But their friend had several years of experience buying and selling used Catholic books, and they immediately began helping him, offering suggestions on how to improve the operation of his business, not realizing that several months later they would branch out and start a virtually identical business and Catholic apostolate of their own.

The circumstances that brought this initiative about, in 1983 and 1984, resulted from events in the Church in the 1960s and 1970s. Vocations to the priesthood and religious life had begun to decline, seminaries and convents and other Catholic institutions had started to close, and as a result many Catholic books and even entire libraries were being

Meditation on the Passion

“Louis Blossius relates that our Lord revealed to several holy women—to St. Gertrude, St. Bridget, St. Mechtilde, and St. Catharine of Sienna—that they who meditate on his Passion are very dear to him. According to St. Francis de Sales, the Passion of our Redeemer should be the ordinary subject of the meditation of every Christian. Oh, what an excellent book is the Passion of Jesus! There we understand, better than in any other book, the malice of sin, and also the mercy and love of God for man. To me it appears that Jesus Christ has suffered so many different pains—the scourging, the crowning with thorns, the crucifixion, etc.—that, having before our eyes so many painful mysteries, we might have a variety of different subjects for meditating on his Passion, by which we might excite sentiments of gratitude and love. St. Augustine writes that ‘there is no more profitable occupation for the soul than to meditate daily on the Passion of Our Lord.’” discarded. Like many other concerned Catholics who wanted to preserve their Catholic heritage, the father and brothers of one of the founders had collected approximately one thousand of these Catholic books. About eight hundred of the books became the first inventory from which the work of the future PCP was born. In Easter Week of 1984 the two left the house of their friend near Auriesville and moved into a trailer home belonging to a retired priest near Albany who celebrated the Tridentine Latin Mass. The priest allowed them to insert a four-page listing of books into a monthly newsletter that he published, and the response to this first catalog from the readers of the newsletter was enthusiastic enough to form PCP's first group of customers and supporters. Most of the books sold quickly, generating a modest but sufficient income to begin an expansion of the work.

From their Albany location they began to travel through the states in the northeastern part of the United States and into Canada, visiting Catholic institutions to inquire about the purchase of discarded books, developing an extensive network of contacts, mostly in the northeast, but on occasion as far south as Louisiana and Puerto Rico, and westward to Chicago, Milwaukee and as far west as Montana. In the late 1980s a used printing press was purchased, enabling one of the founders who had previous experience with printing to save costs by printing the catalogs and begin reprinting formerly out-of-print Catholic books. But in 1994 this founder and staff member returned home to his native India, where he contracted with professional printers there, and shipped the newly reprinted books to the United States for distribution from here. In the meantime two new members joined PCP's staff, and work was undertaken to simultaneously develop the publishing endeavors while maintaining the distribution of used books. The used books proved to be an excellent source not only for books to reprint, but also for measuring the interest and demand in order to decide which titles would be most appropriate to reprint.

While PCP was expanding from merely used books into publishing as well, numerous technological changes were modifying the nature of book distribution and publishing. Between the new members of PCP's staff who joined in 1993, one of them brought professional skills needed to provide a vastly superior office and warehouse, and the other came with the technical skills needed to allow PCP to make use of the new technologies. The member with the technical expertise left PCP in 2007, but simultaneously that same year another friend who keeps current with these technological developments joined us, and immediately he began work to customize our software applications, and then to develop the other technical requirements for publishing catalogs and books and maintaining our web site.

As we begin this thirtieth year, we wanted to provide this brief account of our past history. As the year progresses we intend to describe more of our current work and what lies ahead. To mark the anniversary we will offer occasional anniversary specials, as a means of showing our appreciation for your support of our work and to make the books more easily available. In the meantime we wish to thank you for all that support, and for the encouragement and incentive that many of you have given us during the past thirty years. May God reward you, and bless you abundantly with His graces in the year ahead.

The Foundation of Our Catholic Faith

The Sources of Catholic Dogma

Since the nineteenth century the compiler Father Henry Denzinger has been associated with sound Catholic doctrine and teaching. In the early 1950's the celebrated Dr. Roy J. Deferrari, professor at Catholic University of America, translated the thirtieth edition of Denzinger's Enchiridion Symbolorum. Known in English as The Sources of Catholic Dogma, this handbook of the articles of faith and morals gives us many of the doctrines we need to know in order to be faithful Catholics in this day of modernism, heresy and total confusion about what the Church teaches. This impressive treasury of statements from the early Creeds, the early Popes citing the Church Fathers, and the ecumenical Councils and modern Popes, leaves little room for uncertainty regarding what is or is not Catholic doctrine. The unity of doctrine and belief as well as errors against the Faith are all spelled out very clearly in this monumental work. PCP is happy to present this newly reprinted hardback edition at a time when the very foundations of the Church are being undermined by those who should know better. Product #55712

Immaculate Conception of the Mother of God - eBook

The Most Reverend William Ullathorne Archbishop of Birmingham

The dogma of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary was solemnly defined by Pope Bl. Pius IX on December 8, 1854. It was during that same year that Archbishop Ullathorne wrote this comprehensive study of the dogma, as Bishop Edward Ilsey of Birmingham explains in an introduction to the revised edition of the book, first prepared for publication fifty years later:

In the published “Letters of Archbishop Ullathorne” it is recorded (pp. 57 seqq.) that his admirable book on the Immaculate Conception was written in the year 1854, in the intervals of leisure which the author was able to find during the course of the canonical visitation of his diocese. It was first published in the early part of 1855 . . .

So great was the demand for it that it was reprinted several times from stereotyped plates. In its revised form I hope that the intention and desire of its eminent author may be fulfilled in further promoting the devotion of our people to the Immaculate Mother of God.

The Mass: A Study of the Roman Liturgy

Father Adrian Fortescue

2007 429 pages (first published 1912) reprint of 1930 ed. / hardback with dust jacket

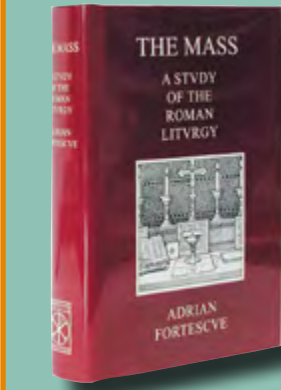

A DEFINITIVE ENGLISH-LANGUAGE WORK ON THE ROMAN RITE OF THE MASS

“Essentially the Missal of Pius V. is the Gregorian Sacramentary; that again is formed from the Gelasian book, which depends on the Leonine collection. We find the prayers of our Canon in the treatise de Sacramentis and allusions to it in the IVth century. So our Mass goes back, without essential change, to the age when it was first developed out of the oldest liturgy of all. It is still redolent of that liturgy, of the days when Caesar ruled the world and thought he could stamp out the faith of Christ, when our fathers met together before dawn and sang a hymn to Christ as to a God. The final result of our inquiry is that, in spite of unsolved problems, in spite of later changes, there is not in Christendom another rite so venerable as ours.”

“ . . . the Roman Missal promulgated by St. Pius V. . . [was] never abrogated . . . ”

The Temporal Mission of the Holy Ghost

Henry Edward Cardinal Manning

Written nearly 150 years ago, The Temporal Mission of the Holy Ghost by Henry Edward Cardinal Manning has today acquired a timeliness even greater than when it was first written. The third Person of the Blessed Trinity has been called by some spiritual writers the “Divine Unknown.” As the divine Person who proceeds from eternity from the Father and the Son, the Holy Spirit exercises a role in the sanctification of souls that has been widely overlooked in our time. Cardinal Manning’s The Temporal Mission of the Holy Ghost corrects this misunderstanding. It explains a unique presence of the Holy Spirit which is not the same as His indwelling in individual souls from the beginning of time. It is something more, for it is His presence in the Holy Catholic Church, where He is the Soul of the Mystical Body of Christ. It is not enough to say that the Holy Ghost dwells in any soul who is in the state of grace, for this fact alone does not explain His presence in the one, true Church. Non-Catholic Christians can receive valid sacraments, but until they become members of the Catholic Church they are not yet part of the Mystical Body. Cardinal Manning’s book is perhaps unequalled in religious literature as an explanation of this essential truth, with the exception of Pope Leo XIII’s encyclical on the Holy Spirit, and Pope Pius XII’s encyclical Mystici Corporis on the Catholic Church as the exclusive embodiment of the Mystical Body of Christ

THE CATENA CORNER

A SHORT LESSON FROM THE CATENA AUREA
ST. MATTHEW V. 23-26 CHAP 9
Pg 351, THE CATENA AUREA, ST. THOMAS AQUINAS
Edited by John Henry Newman

23. And when Jesus came into the ruler’s house, and saw the minstrels and the people making a noise,

24. He said unto them, Give place : for the maid is not dead, but sleepeth. And they laughed him to scorn.

25. But when the people were put forth, he went in, and took her by the hand, and the maid arose.

26. And the fame hereof went abroad into all that land.

Chrys.: We may suppose that He proceeded slowly, and spake longer to the woman whom He had healed, that He might suffer the maid to die, and thus an evident miracle of restoring to life might be wrought. In the case of Lazarus also He waited till the third day. “And when he saw the minstrels and the people making a noise;” this was a proof of her death.

Ambrose., Ambrosiaster, in Luc., 8, 52: For by the ancient custom minstrels were engaged to make lamentation for the dead.

Chrys.: But Christ put forth all the pipers, but took in the parents, that it might not be said that He had healed her by any other means; and before the restoring to life He excites their expectations by His words, “And he said, Give place: for the maid is not dead, but sleepeth.”

Bede, in Luc.: As though He had said, To you she is dead, but to God who has power to give life, she sleeps only both in soul and body.

Chrys.: By this saying, He soothes the minds of those that were present, and shews that it is easy to Him to raise the dead; the like He did in the case of Lazarus, “Our friend Lazarus sleepeth.” [John 11:11] This was also a lesson to them not to be afraid of death; forasmuch as He himself also should die, He made His disciples learn in the persons of others confidence and patient endurance of death. For when He was near, death was but as sleep. When He had said this, “They mocked him.” And He did not rebuke their mocking; that this mocking, and the pipes and all other things, might be a proof of her death. For ofttimes at His miracles when men would not believe, He convicted them by their own answers; as in the case of Lazarus, when He said, “Where have ye laid him?” so that they that answered, “Come and see,” and, “He stinketh, for he hath now been dead four days;” could no longer disbelieve that He had raised a dead man.

Jerome: They that had mocked the Reviver were not worthy to behold the mystery of the revival; and therefore it follows, “And when the multitude was put forth, he entered, and took her by the hand, and the maid arose.”

Chrys.: He restored her to life not by bringing in another soul, but by recalling that which had departed, and as it were raising it from sleep, and through this sight preparing the way for belief of the resurrection. And He not only restores her to life, but commands food to be given her, as the other Evangelists relate, that which was done might be seen to be no delusion. “And the fame of him went abroad into all that country.”

Gloss., non occ.: The fame, namely, of the greatness and novelty of the miracle, and its established truth; so that it could not be supposed to be a forgery.

Hilary: Mystically; The Lord enters the ruler’s house, that is, the synagogue, throughout which there resounded in the songs of the Law a strain of wailing.

Jerome: To this day the damsel lays dead in the ruler’s house; and they that seem to be teachers are but minstrels singing funeral dirges. The Jews also are not the crowd of believers, but of “people making a noise.” But when the fulness of the Gentiles shall come in, then all Israel shall be saved.

Hilary: But that the number of the elect might be known to be but few out of the whole body of believers, the multitude is put forth; the Lord indeed would that they should be saved, but they mocked at His sayings and actions, and so were not worthy to be made partakers of His resurrection.

Jerome: He took her by the hand, and the maid arose; because if the hands of the Jews which are defiled with blood be not first cleansed, their synagogue which is dead shall not revive.

Hilary: “His fame went about into all that country;” that is, the salvation of the elect, the gift and works of Christ are preached.

Rabanus: Morally; The damsel dead in the house is the soul dead in thought. He says that she is asleep, because they that are now asleep in sin may yet be roused by penitence. The minstrels are flatterers who cherish the dead.

Greg., Mor., xviii, 43: The multitude are put forth that the damsel may be raised; for unless the multitude of worldly cares is first banished from the secrets of the heart, the soul which is laid dead within, cannot rise again.

Rabanus: The maiden is raised in the house with few to witness, the young man without the gate, and Lazarus in the presence of many; for a public scandal requires a public expiation; a less notorious, a lesser remedy; and secret sins may be done away by penitence.

The Great Commentary of Cornelius a Lapide

The Commentary on the Gospels in Four Volumes

Father Cornelius a Lapide (Cornelis Cornelissen van den Steen), a Flemish Jesuit, was born in 1567, and died in Rome in 1637. Soon after being ordained to the priesthood on December 24, 1595, he became a professor of Sacred Scripture at Louvain. It was twenty years later that he was called to Rome, where he continued to teach Sacred Scripture. As a zealous priest and devout religious he left to the world a complete commentary on all the books of the Bible with the exception of the Psalms and the book of Job, with the result that he has become one of the most renowned Catholic Scripture commentators of modern times, winning the admiration of certain Protestants even while they disagreed with his doctrine.

Among those non-Catholic admirers was an Anglican clergyman, Rev. Thomas W. Moseman, who in the late nineteenth century translated several books of Father Cornelius a Lapide's commentary on the New Testament, including the Four Gospels. Makes a great gift.

Cornelius a Lapide / Thomas W. Mossman, W. F. Cobb & Michael Miller, trs. ribbons, 2008 2930p

The definitive English commentaries on the Gospels and Psalms

◀ All three Marked Down to $225⁰⁰ ▶

Catholics rely on approved Church sources, resting heavily on the early Fathers and Doctors of the church, to interpret Scripture. The Church disapproves of individual interpretations which can be fraught with errors and cause so much trouble. In these three sources one finds the bedrock of the Gospels and Psalms.

The Truth of Papal Claims

by Rafael Cardinal Merry del Val

“... Pius X, assisted by the great soul of his most faithful Secretary of State, Cardinal Merry del Val, gave proof of that enlightened prudence of the saints” – Pope Pius XII

“The Truth of Papal Claims, by Raphael Cardinal Merry del Val, which Preserving Christian Publications has recently reprinted . . . is a worthy edition of an important Catholic work.” – Raymond Leo Cardinal Burke

In the thirteenth century St. Thomas Aquinas, while describing the Church as the Mystical Body of Christ, explained its nature in various ways. But in modern times a new problem arose, when the Protestants preached an invisible Church of saints in opposition to the visible Catholic Church on earth. The Anglican form of this teaching was the “branch theory,” which made Catholics, the Orthodox and the Anglicans all different “branches” of the invisible Church taught by Protestantism. Cardinal Merry del Val shows in his book that the only true “branch” theory is that of the Gospel of St. John 15:6. There is only one Vine, and branches must be united to this Vine to have life. If there is confusion about the nature of the Church after the Second Vatican Council, Catholics must turn to the teaching of popes such as Leo XIII and Pius XII, who taught how the only living vine is the Mystical Body which is the Catholic Church, the Soul of which is the Third Person of the Blessed Trinity. A half century after the start of the Council and the resulting ecumenism, we must always remember that the Catholic Church alone is the one true Church of Our Lord Jesus Christ.

Gregorian Chant for Holy Week

The most important week for any Catholic is Holy Week. During that time the Church wants us to reflect upon one of the greatest mysteries of our Faith: the Passion and Death of our Blessed Lord. The Church over the centuries has assembled some of the greatest prayers and ceremonies to commemorate this great act of love of Jesus. And these prayers and ceremonies are all accompanied by beautiful psalm tones and sublime Gregorian chant that normally are only heard during that mournful week.

Since our recently reprinted Liber Brevior was based on the original 1954 edition, it did not include the restored Pius XII Holy Week ceremonies and offices. So we at PCP decided to put together a book just for Holy Week that would include all the chants and melodies for all the offices, ceremonies and Masses of that week. Thus our new Gregorian Chant Holy Week Book was born.

Indeed, it can be argued that it is difficult to restore the traditional sense of Holy Week on the parish level today. But we think that by introducing this book it will help to bring back the sense of the sacred to that week, if properly implemented and used by those in charge of conducting Holy Week services. The new Gregorian Chant Holy Week Book was made by taking out those parts from the 1962 Liber Usualis that pertain to the entire week, beginning with the restored Palm Sunday ceremonies up to and including the Easter Vigil. Therefore parishes interested in doing the offices of the Sacred Triduum known as Tenebrae, for example, can find this book most valuable. And all the other sung ceremonies can be found in it as well.

For choirs on the parish level we believe this book of 244 pages is smaller, more useful and more affordable for Holy Week than the larger and bulkier Liber Usualis. As usual we have had this book sewn and bound with a hardcover durable binding for a long life. One ribbon marker was inserted in the book as a speedy reference locator. All the music is in Gregorian notation with the rubrics in English.
