Cardinal Merry del Val on the Authority of the Pope

"The Truth of Papal Claims, by Raphael Cardinal Merry del Val, which Preserving Christian Publications has recently reprinted . . . is a worthy edition of an important Catholic work." – Raymond Leo Cardinal Burke

"Hence Dr. Oxenham may learn, that by Infallibility we do not mean 'impeccability' or sinlessness in the person of S. Peter or of his successors, who are accountable to God for their own consciences and their own lives like every other human being; ... we do not mean that the Roman Pontiff receives special revelations from heaven, or that by a revelation of the Holy Spirit he may invent or teach new doctrines not contained in the deposit of Faith, though, when occasion offers, and especially in times of conflict, he may define a point which all have not clearly recognized in that Faith, or which some may be striving to put out of view. Nor do we mean that every utterance that proceeds from the Pope's mouth, or from the Pope's pen, is infallible because it is his. Great as our filial duty of reverence is towards whatever he may say, great as our duty of obedience must be to the guidance of the Chief Shepherd, we do not hold that every word of his is infallible, or that he must always be right. Much less do we dream of teaching that he is infallible, or in any degree superior to other men, when he speaks on matters that are scientific, or historical, or political, or that he may not make mistakes of judgment in dealing with contemporary events, with men and things" [pp. 18-19].

The above statement in 1902 of Archbishop Rafael Merry de Val, future Cardinal and Secretary of State under Pope St. Pius X, was his answer to the Protestant theologian in Rome, F. Nutcombe Oxenham, who challenged Catholic teaching on the authority of the Pope. He summarized the Anglican chaplain's position as follows: "...Dr. Oxenham imagines, like so many other Protestants, that the Catholic doctrine of the infallibility of S. Peter and of his successors implies impeccability, which no Pope, no Council, no Catholic theologian ever dreamt of asserting" [pp. 6-7].

"Does Dr. Oxenham imagine that even today a Bishop might not expostulate with a Pope, who, in his judgment, might be acting in a way which was liable to mislead those under his own charge . . . ? The hypothesis is quite conceivable, and in no way destroys or diminishes the supremacy of the Pope. And yet an individual Bishop does not occupy the exceptional position of S.

Paul, a fellow-Apostle of the Prince of the Apostles. Even a humble nun, S. Catherine of Siena, expostulated with the reigning Pontiff, in her day, while fully acknowledging all his great prerogatives" [p. 74].

"We may conclude this argument with another text from S. Chrysostom, who again steps in to refute Dr. Oxenham's views about S. Peter. 'Observe his (Paul's) prudence,' writes that Father of the Greek Church, 'he said not to him (Peter), thou does wrong in living as a Jew, but he alleges his (Peter's) former mode of living, that the admonition and the counsel may seem to come, not from Paul's mind, but from the judgment of Peter already expressed. For, had he said, thou dost wrong to keep the Law, Peter's disciples would have blamed him, but now, hearing that this admonition and correction came, not from Paul's judgment, but that Peter himself so lived, and held in his mind this belief whether they would or not, they were obliged to be quiet' [Hom. in loc.]' [pp. 74-75].

ADDRESS SERVICE REQUESTED

Bishop Juan Rodolfo Laise, O.F.M.Cap.: Rome Never Approved Communion in the Hand

The practice of receiving Communion in the hand has become so widespread throughout the Church that one might easily conclude that it has been approved by Rome. And those who are unfamiliar with the history of the Church's liturgical practices might think that this custom had been in use in previous centuries, to such an extent that it is a longstanding practice of the Church.

Both of these impressions are incorrect. The Most Rev. Juan Rodolfo Laise, Bishop Emeritus of San Luis, Argentina, wrote a book for the faithful of his diocese nearly two decades ago, in order to explain why he was preserving the only traditional practice of the Church for receiving Communion, which is Communion on the tongue. His Excellency demonstrates that the opposite practice, that of Communion in the hand, is not approved by the Church but instead is merely tolerated as an abuse, in very limited circumstances, in order to prevent a greater evil. The book is Communion in the Hand: Documents and History.

Bishop Laise begins by transcribing the complete texts of the two Vatican documents that constitute the Church's current laws governing the reception of Communion. Their meaning and purpose are very clear. Because the practice of Communion in the hand had been introduced in certain regions without Rome's permission, in violation of the Church's laws, the Holy See, after consultation with the bishops, established norms whereby individual bishops, when faced with this disobedience within their dioceses, could allow the practice on a limited basis. The obvious purpose of this legislation by Rome was to avoid a greater evil, that of a more intensive revolt against the authority of the Church. An individual bishop's authorization to act in this manner depended in turn on a general request to be made by the episcopal conferences of individual countries, followed by authorization from Rome. In this manner the practice of Communion in the hand could be limited to those regions where the abuse arose, preventing the disobedient practice from spreading elsewhere in the Church.

In the decades that followed the enactment of this legislation, however, many individual bishops as well as representatives of episcopal conferences did not examine the legislative texts carefully, and began to introduce the practice on a widespread basis, overlooking the strict requirements imposed by the Holy See for the purpose of limiting its use. As a result this practice became almost universal, which is the very situation that Rome emphatically wanted to prevent. It was an abuse that the Church never approved, but merely tolerated in order to avoid the greater evil of widespread rebellion against the authority of the Church.

The second false impression that Bishop Laise disproves and corrects is the mistaken idea that Communion in the hand is a longstanding tradition in the Church, having its origins in the early Church, and that the reintroduction of it today is merely the revival of an ancient tradition. In disproving this theory Bishop Laise enters into a profound and detailed analysis of what constitutes authentic tradition within the Church and how the Church employs the principles of natural law and canon law in governing the faithful, while preserving the Church's doctrinal, moral and liturgical traditions. Bishop Laise's book is therefore a simple but comprehensive explanation of the Church's profound love and respect for the Real Presence of Our Lord in the Holy Eucharist.
