The History of the Saint Michael Book

Pope Leo XIII and the Prayer to St. Michael

by Kevin J. Symonds

Foreword by Bishop Athanasius Schneider

The Publisher's Account of How the Book Came About

It was in early 2014 that Preserving Christian Publications was contacted by Kevin J. Symonds of Waco, Texas, asking if we would be interested in publishing a book that he had written, a historical investigation of the famous vision of Pope Leo XIII. We immediately realized the book's importance, because the famous vision of the Pope was clouded by uncertainty, by varying accounts that were inconsistent – and yet it was a historical event that seemed to be of central importance for modern times. The fact that the author had done a thorough investigation of all the information he could find about Pope Leo's vision seemed to be something that many Catholics were waiting for, and we began a series of discussions that resulted in the book's publication a year and a half later.

The fact that it took so long to publish a book of merely 200 pages requires an explanation. The book definitely resolved a historical mystery, but now that the history of Leo XIII's vision is finally brought to light, what does it mean? What is the ultimate significance of the Pope's vision in light of the teaching of the Church, and what is its meaning for Catholics today? In other words, what is needed is not merely a history of Leo XIII's vision, but a doctrinal study of its significance, an aspect that the author was qualified to provide because he has a master's degree in theology.

The author then set to work to write additional chapters to complete his account, making the book not merely a historical but also a theological investigation. As he continued his research, we discovered a short work by a nineteenth century exorcist that had been praised by the Holy See as reflecting its own thinking, which in the context meant the mind of Pope Leo XIII himself. The exorcist had shown not only the nature of diabolical assaults against individual souls, but also against victim souls who offered their sufferings for the salvation of others, and ultimately against the Church herself. Finally, the exorcist also described the central role of Our Lady in combating diabolical assaults against the Church.* This in turn pointed to the importance of the apparitions in Fatima approximately three decades after Pope Leo XIII's vision. In the meantime, while continuing his research, Kevin Symonds studied chapter XIII of the Carmelite biography of Sister Lucia, which had just been published in 2013. This is the chapter devoted to the Third Secret. The chapter seemed to be of such importance that we contacted the Coimbra Carmelites in January of 2015, asking for permission to print it as an appendix to the book on Pope Leo's vision. The Carmelites replied very promptly, but stating that they could not give permission to print the entire chapter because the book was soon to be published in English by the World Apostolate of Fatima-Blue Army (WAF). Kevin Symonds then contacted the WAF, just as the biography was being prepared to go to press, but he discovered a mistake in their translation of the words of Our Lady to Sister Lucia during the apparition of January 3, 1944.

Since this happened at the last minute, the WAF decided that instead of delaying the book's publication, they would correct the error in the second edition. However, when the error was discovered soon afterwards by associates of the late Father Nicholas Gruner, these latter concluded that the inaccurate translation was deliberate, aimed at altering the words of Our Lady, whereas in fact it had merely been an honest mistake. Their reasoning was based upon the assumption that the Vatican itself was hiding part of the Third Secret, a theory that reached a climax on Pentecost Sunday of this year with an article on the Internet, which cited the German priest Father Ingo Dollinger. However, this speculation was ended on the following Saturday, when the Vatican published a denial from Pope Emeritus Benedict XVI himself.

What is the lesson to be learned from this controversy about the Third Secret? It is that all those who are genuinely devoted to Fatima should work together in the search for the truth. This is what Kevin Symonds sought to do in conducting his research, and in his discussions with the World Apostolate of Fatima in the final months of the preparation of his book on Pope Leo XIII and the St. Michael Prayer, and afterwards with the late Father Gruner's Fatima Center. At the very last minute, when his book was already at the printer's, he received a special foreword written for it by Bishop Athanasius Schneider, who added to the timely research of this lay theologian the approbation of a successor of the Apostles – a bishop with a special devotion to the Holy Angels, and a profound understanding of their role in defending the Church against the attacks of the demons.

Manual of Episcopal Ceremonies

Based on the Caeremoniale Episcoporum, Decrees of the Sacred Congregation of Rites and Approved Authors [2 vols in 1] – by Rt Rev. Aurelius Stehle, OSB

“Curiously enough, it has been my good fortune to use Archabbot Aurelius Stehle’s MANUAL OF EPISCOPAL CEREMONIES in a variety of roles. First as a sacristan, then as a master of ceremonies, and finally as a bishop, I have discovered myself seeking the direction of its pages. Never have I been disappointed.

“For the sacristan, its careful listing immediately before each ceremony of the preparations required is invaluable. The admirable and orderly fashion of this listing serves as an infallible guide to all, whose duty it is to set the scene and arrange the background, against which any impressive ceremony moves.

“For the master of ceremonies, its complete outline of the ceremony itself, coupled with its special notes for each participant, is priceless. This arrangement, giving in a glance the ceremony in its totality as well as its respective parts, enables the master to set up, well in advance, each ceremonial situation. This assures a reverent yet continuing execution of the ceremony, deeply appreciated by all the participants within and without the sanctuary.

“For the bishop, its wealth of detail, pertinent to the ceremonial life he finds so much a part of his office, makes this work an absolute ‘must’ for his library. It is always reliable for the answer to problems related to ceremonies. Its careful use assures the bishop and his retinue at the Altar, that they are performing the Divine Liturgy according to the strict mind of the Church. This is no small consolation to those who love the Church, and try earnestly to live its life of worship.

“A number of revisions, made necessary by the latest Roman decrees, are included in this present edition, the fifth in an enviable line. These represent a labor of love on the part of the revisor, Father Emmeran Rettger . . .

“Fortunately too in the revision, the mode and the tone of the original work remain. These have combined to make the original a classic in its field. Like the saintly Archbishop Canevin, who recommended the first edition, I urge ‘all who are interested in having ceremonies conducted according to the mind of the Church’ to consult and study this present edition. I am confident the result will be a thrilling experience for all who love to offer with the Church the Holy Sacrifice in the magnificent setting of the Pontifical Mass.”

Most Rev. William G. Connare, Bishop of Greensburg.
Feast of St. Monica, May 4, 1961

Communion in the Hand: Documents & History by Bishop Juan Rodolfo Laise

*From the Preface to the Italian edition
by Bishop Athanasius Schneider:*

“The book of Bishop Juan Rodolfo Laise and his pastoral initiatives concerning the manner of receiving Holy Communion reflect the spirit and the attitude of the Church Fathers, who have cultivated with loving care and with apostolic firmness the purity of the lex credendi and also inseparably the lex orandi....

“I consider it an honor and joy to be able to present this book of the most esteemed Bishop Juan Rodolfo Laise, ‘decus episcoporum Argentinae.’ I hope this prophetic voice of an elderly bishop, who has retained his youth and purity of faith and reverent love for the Eucharistic mystery, may enkindle readers with the same faith and the same love and contribute to the universal restoration of the more sacred and reverent manner of receiving the Lord's Body. In fact, every true Catholic and even more every true priest of Christ must love, worship and defend Jesus in the Eucharist.”

The harm that comes to souls from the lack of reading holy books makes me shudder... What power spiritual reading has to lead to a change of course, and to make even worldly people enter into the way of perfection.

Our Lady of Fatima and Russia

Introduction: The Day of the January 1944 Apparition

In his well known book on the Third Secret, Fatima archivist Father Alonso indicated very clearly – at the time when he wrote, still prior to the publication of the Secret – that the exact day of Our Lady’s apparition to Sister Lúcia in January of 1944 was unknown.** Other sources, however, gave an approximate date based on the testimony of Mother Cunha Matos. That hypothetical date was January 2. But after the publication of the Secret, and later the publication of the Carmelite biography of Sister Lúcia, it became known that Sister Lúcia herself had indicated, in the text of the Secret itself and in her diary, that it was on January 3 that Our Lady appeared to her and that she wrote the Third Secret.

This discrepancy of one day has recently given rise to yet another theory by proponents of a “fourth secret” – that there was not one January apparition but two, on both January 2 and January 3, and from two apparitions came two separate documents. However, based upon Father Alonso’s statement that the exact date was unknown, previous speculation about January 2 could only be considered hypothetical, and after the publication of Sister Lúcia’s own statements the hypothesis of January 2 gave way to the reality of January 3 instead. For the proponents of the fourth secret, on the other hand, it was the theory that guided the interpretation of the facts, so that the former hypothesis of January 2 became itself a “fact,” added to the known facts revealed in Sister Lúcia’s texts regarding the January 3 date.

There is another and equally important reason behind this reluctance of the defenders of an alleged missing document to abandon the theory, even in the face of growing evidence against it. If the Third Secret is about the errors of Russia, as Sister Lúcia explained to Pope John Paul II in 1982, proponents of a missing document are not likely to accept or even understand what Sister Lúcia explained if they do not understand what Our Lady Herself meant by the errors of Russia. The same author who launched the theory of two January apparitions also wrote a book touching on the recent history of Russia, in which arguments were advanced to portray the Western democracies rather than Russia as the focal point of the contemporary crisis threatening the Church and the world.

Pius XII, Communism and the Western Democracies

Behind this historical perspective of the above cited author, motivating the continued promotion of the theory of a missing document of the Third Secret, there is a specific interpretation of the history of the Church in the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. Outstanding among the documented histories of Fatima is the famous three-volume work by the French author Frère Michel de la Sainte Trinité. Students of Fatima are very indebted to Frère Michel’s research, but they are also confronted with the author’s political perspective brought to play in the interpretation of Fatima. The Second World War, as shown in the previous article in the present series, found Catholics and members of the hierarchy on both sides giving different interpretations and applications of how the message of Fatima applied to the events of the conflict. Influenced by one such interpretation, Frère Michel is understandably critical of the manner in which England and the United States carried out their alliance with Soviet Russia to defeat Nazi Germany. Not limiting himself to criticizing the errors of the Allies, however, he also questions the wisdom of a radio address that Pope Pius XII gave in 1944, concerning the role of the Church in relation to the democracies.

What is not sufficiently clear in Frère Michel’s analysis is that Pius XII was not exalting democracy above other legitimate forms of government, but seeking instead to Christianize the existing democracies of the time, just as the Church had Christianized the monarchies of the past, for the purpose of defending Christian Civilization. A body of doctrine was developed by St. Pius X, and Popes Benedict XV, Pius XI and Pius XII, under the name “Catholic Action,” to show how the laity within the Church were to be mobilized in the defense of the Church and a Christian political order.

Among the Catholics of France, however, suspicions arose during the pontificates of Pius XI and Pius XII, which involved not only their judgments relating to political affairs, but also their understanding of the papal role in formulating and guiding Catholic Action. Frère Michel received training in the religious life from the Abbé Georges de Nantes, a priest well known for his political views and his suspicion of democracy. He was part of a French school of political thought that was influencing traditionally minded Catholics in other countries, an evolving perception of political events which, more and more, would see not Russia, but Western democracy, as the primary danger to the Church.

While this school of thought was developing, a different perspective arose in South America under the leadership of the Brazilian layman Plinio Corrêa de Oliveira. His 1943 work In Defense of Catholic Action not only explained the doctrine of the Popes in a way that showed its continuity with all of Catholic Tradition, but also made the specific applications to the moral and political crisis of the twentieth century. Plinio Corrêa de Oliveira, in a manner consistent with a consensus among theologians and canonists, saw Catholic Action as the Church’s answer to the emerging totalitarianism, as a moral and religious response that also had political consequences.

In the midst of these separate perspectives on two continents, led from France and Brazil respectively, a common consensus about the fundamental importance of Fatima, to help guide the Church through the present crisis, began to form throughout the Catholic world among those adhering to these two schools of thought. Both perspectives converged in the 1960s in their agreement about the threat of Russian Communism. While differing in their judgments about how to mobilize Catholics worldwide, and in their understanding of various national and political movements, they were able nevertheless to come together to form a common consensus regarding certain Catholic principles on which to act. This unity of action began to form during the first session of the Second Vatican Council in 1962.

Debate at the Council on the Church and the Secular State

While the Popes of the modern period prior to the Council were expressing their concerns about the threat to the Church posed by the modern secular State, a debate began, already in the Preparatory Commission prior to the Council, about the Church's understanding of the relationship between the Church and modern governments. The traditional doctrine had emphasized that in Catholic countries the State should recognize the Catholic Church as the true Religion. The newer theological opinion, on the other hand, focused on a concept of the rights of conscience and the religious liberty of the individual citizen. From this debate the following question arose: If the State no longer recognizes the authority of the Church, what will be the resulting attitude of governments toward the Church, her authority and her rights? Among those who were warning of the dangers of the secular State were the voices of a layman, and of bishops themselves, who expressed their common concerns during the Council.

a) A Warning from the Laity

The lay voice was that of Plinio Corrêa de Oliveira. To explain the moral dangers that he saw as a layman, he wrote The Freedom of the Church in the Communist State, a book-length essay that was distributed to all the bishops at the Council. He argued that the Church can never co-exist with Communism, even when the Communist State would offer the Church a certain freedom of worship. For the Church, he argued, must preach not only the theological virtues, but also the moral virtues, which include the virtue of justice and the right of private property, upheld by the seventh and tenth commandments. Communism, on the other hand, determined to abolish all private property, is in total opposition to the Church's teaching with regard to these commandments of the Decalogue.

b) A Warning from a Group of Bishops

The second warning against any abandonment of the traditional doctrine of the Church came from a group of bishops within the Council, led by Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre. Central to their argument was the fact that Blessed Pius IX had condemned in Quanta Cura the proposition that religious liberty must be the norm, and that it can only be limited when the public order requires it.

The proposition affirmed by the Council seemed to be saying the same thing, word for word, that Pius IX had condemned. Years later, with the publication of Catechism of the Catholic Church, this conflict between the pre-Conciliar and post-Conciliar teaching was partially addressed with the explanation that what Pius IX condemned, by the term "public peace," was a naturalistic notion of society completely separate from the influence of religion, whereas the Council understood "public order" as having broader social significance to include the role of the Church. The Church, in other words, is free to carry out her mission to influence society. But a question still remained regarding how this principle was to be applied.

Conclusion: St. Ambrose, Cardinal Burke, and the Archbishop of Kiev

In the fourth century, when the emperor Theodosius ordered the killing of seven thousand inhabitants of Thessalonica, St. Ambrose of Milan reacted by proclaiming Theodosius excommunicated. Theodosius promptly learned his lesson and repented, and was readmitted to Communion. Today, more than sixteen centuries later, an analogous situation prevails when various Catholic politicians and judges support the killing of untold numbers of unborn babies, by enacting and enforcing laws that approve of abortion, and often even financing the procedure.

In the face of this abuse of political authority by certain nominal Catholics, Bishop Raymond Leo Burke, the former bishop of La Crosse, Wisconsin, later archbishop of St. Louis, and finally Cardinal of the Roman Curia and of the Knights of Malta, published two pastoral letters on the duties of Catholic citizens and Catholic public officials. In the meantime he insisted that Catholic politicians who oppose Catholic moral teaching cannot receive Communion, thereby giving an example of the episcopal leadership manifested centuries before by St. Ambrose. Various other bishops, however, have countered Cardinal Burke's action, making the consciences of these politicians the norm of their behavior rather than the authoritative judgment of the hierarchy of the Church.

It is the modern totalitarian State, epitomized and brought to power by the Communist Revolution in Russia, that spread such errors throughout the world, claiming for the secularized State an absolute power over the life and death of its citizens. The leadership of Raymond Leo Cardinal Burke is a manifestation of the steadfastness of the Church in the face of such claims of the secular State, and of the moral obligation of Catholics in public life to uphold the Church's teaching, lest the very sanctity of the Church and of her Sacraments be compromised, and in order that the Social Kingship of Our Lord Jesus Christ might be extended over all of human society.

While Western democracies in recent decades have allowed these errors to spread within their own societies, it would be another error itself to assume that Russia has in some way already converted. When Pope Francis met with the Russian Orthodox Patriarch in Cuba and signed a joint declaration, the Major Archbishop of Kiev on behalf of the Catholics of Ukraine appropriately responded by warning fellow Catholics that Russian aggression has not ended in Catholic Ukraine, and by questioning whether the recent Russian military action in Syria truly merited the title of "holy war" claimed for it by Russian Orthodox bishops. The fact that other nations have joined Russia in spreading its errors does not mean that Russia itself has ceased from exercising its leading role, but, on the contrary, that it has been successful in promoting its errors worldwide, bringing wars and persecution of the Church as Our Lady foretold.

Comments on the Catholic Bibliographical Index

Dr. Barbara Berfanger, Ed.D.
Former President, St. Mary's College, Kansas

Recently I learned about the release of the Catholic Bibliographical Index by Preserving Christian Publications. My experience in research and in teaching led me to recognize quickly and without doubt that this Index offers an immense, rich resource about works by Catholic authors.

The Index is easy to navigate. Once the user gets started, he can browse by category or search the entire database. The works are listed in a wide range of categories, and the titles are numbered within each category. This feature can keep the searcher on track and save him from getting lost in a long list. The listed titles, most with brief annotations, are clear, well-spaced, and easy to read. Bold-faced headings attract reader's attention to essential publication information.

Anyone searching for references to Catholic authors can find the Index beneficial. It can be helpful to the teacher who wants to compile a reading list to aid students following his or her courses. Secondary and college instructors will find the Index indispensable in guiding students in traditional methods of using an index as an early step in composing a research paper. By being directed to worthwhile works to consider, students can gain skill and will likely discover and appreciate some of the treasures that Catholics have inherited. The Index can yield satisfying rewards to advanced scholars and even to general readers who are pursuing specific searches.

It is a pleasure to give a hearty welcome and endorsement to this gold-mine of information.

What Is the Catholic Bibliographical Index?

<http://www.cbi.pcpbooks.net/>

St. John the Evangelist ended his Gospel by stating that "many other things which Jesus did . . . if they were written every one, the world itself, I think, would not be able to contain the books that should be written." By way of analogy, while guarding the distinction between the divine and the human, one might say that no bibliography in existence can contain all the books written by Catholic authors during the two thousand years of the history of the Church.

For more than a quarter of a century, however, Preserving Christian Publications has been electronically cataloging books by Catholic authors obtained from Catholic institutions and private collections, primarily in the northeast of the United States, but also from the Midwest and Far West of the country, as well as from southeastern Canada and from Puerto Rico. The resulting bibliography of nearly 25,000 Catholic titles is far from a complete listing of books by Catholic authors. Nevertheless we believe it serves as a useful research tool, and as an introduction to the world's Catholic literature. Although primarily a list of Catholic books published in English, it also contains many Latin titles and books in several other languages as well.

It is not always easy to determine whether or not certain authors are Catholic, either because they are not sufficiently known to us, or because their publishing houses are not Catholic. But we have always tried to verify the Catholic identity of authors before including their works in the bibliography. In a relatively small number of cases we have included some non-Catholic writers when they wrote on Catholic subjects, but we have added "non-Catholic" after their names to distinguish them from the other authors in the list. In some rare cases we may have mistakenly included some non-Catholic authors without identifying them as such, but we are confident that such errors are very minimal. Therefore this Catholic Bibliographical Index represents the fruit of more than three decades of our work in making Catholic books better known and available to readers throughout the world.
