Essay on Catholicism, Liberalism, and Socialism

by Juan Donoso Cortés [1809-1853]

Excerpt from Part III, Chapter 3, "The Dogma of Solidarity — Contradictions of the Liberal School":

From which we see that the dogma of solidarity not only confers nobility upon man, but also dignity upon human nature. This is not the case with regard to the communist theory of solidarity, of which we shall presently speak. According to this theory, the solidarity of humanity does not mean the vast association of men who are united because they have but one and the same nature, but it means that humanity is a living and organic unity which absorbs all men, who in place of constituting it are only its instruments.

According to the Catholic dogma, the individuals are exalted to the same dignity as the species. Catholicism holds an equal and sublime level, without inclining to any undue elevation or depression. It does not ennoble human nature in order to humiliate man, but it desires that both man and humanity may be raised to divine heights. When I examine myself, and reflect upon what I am, and when I behold myself in communion with the first man and with the last of men, and when I consider the actions I perform and see them survive me, and become the cause in the course of their perpetual prolongation of acts multiplied upon acts, which, in their turn, are perpetually multiplied, even to the end of time; when I think that all these actions combined have in my act their origin, and that they will testify in my regard not only for what I do, but for what I have caused others to do, and that I shall accordingly be judged worthy either of reward or condemnation; when I meditate upon all these things, I can only prostrate myself before God and acknowledge that it is not given to me to understand or to measure the immensity of the dignity with which God has invested me. Who but God could thus raise all things to so elevated and perfectly just a standard? When man wishes to exalt any object, he does so only by depressing what he does not elevate. In religious spheres, he does not know how to raise himself without lowering God, nor does he know how to exalt God without debasing himself. In the political world, man does not know how to render homage to liberty without depriving authority of the respect and obedience due to it. In social life, he alternately either sacrifices society to the individual or the individual to society, forever fluctuating, as we have seen, between the communist despotism and Proudhonian anarchy. If he at times attempts to maintain a just equipoise everywhere by establishing a certain accord and justice in things, then the balance with which he would adjust them falls from his hand and is broken, as if there existed an irremediable disproportion between the weight of this balance and the weakness of man. It would seem as if God, when He gave to man dominion over the sciences, had withheld one alone which He destined to remain under His own sway and jurisdiction—the science of equilibrium [pp. 160-162].

Communion in the Hand: Documents & History

by Bishop Juan Rodolfo Laise

Excerpt from Part IV, Conclusions:

... the new practice has not been desired by the Holy See . . . but rather has only been permitted due to the unyielding insistence of some episcopal conferences (especially in Protestant countries); and this only after a completely abusive introduction which was not possible to resist, in spite of the complaints and prohibitions from Rome.

Therefore the habitual reading of the document is false. According to this reading, in the face of the various petitions and the results of the consultation with the bishops, the pope decided to grant the practice of both rites to the episcopal conferences that requested it. In reality, the purpose of MD [Memoriale Domini] was not to be an instrument for the adoption of Communion in the hand but rather to maintain its prohibition. All of the reasons cited by the pope for this are of great weight. They have a solid basis and enjoy permanent validity as they confirm the concern for avoiding all that has the appearance of irreverence towards God in the Real Presence in the Eucharist. The introduction of this change is of enormous importance because, given that the treatment of the Eucharist is pedagogic, the lack of concern for the Particles does harm the doctrine. Communion on the tongue, on the other hand, is a sign of the real and substantial presence of the Lord and of the essential distinction between the common priesthood of the faithful and the ministerial priesthood.

Frequently one minimizes the danger of desecration, saying that it always existed. . . . With the Communion in the hand a miracle would be needed so that in each Communion some Particle not fall or remain in the hand of the faithful.

ORDERING INFORMATION

Each book is identified by name, author, year published, number of pages (p) and price. "IL" stands for illustrated and "pb" for paperback where applicable. Condition of each book is identified as follows: (E) Excellent, (VG) Very Good, (G) Good, (F) Fair, (P) Poor. "Bi" and "Pg" refer to binding and pages respectively.

Because we specialize in used and out-of-print books, we frequently have only one or two copies of many of our titles. Refunds are made for books that are no longer available. Books reserved by telephone are held for our customers, and then are mailed as soon as possible after receipt of payment. Books for which payment has not been received after fifteen days are made available for sale to other customers.

Books in Print: In addition to our used books we also offer a selection of new books, primarily reprints of formerly out-of-print works. New books are listed in our section "Books in Print." Discounts on quantity orders (applies only to books in print, not to used and out-of-print books) are available: 10% on orders of three or more copies, 20% for ten or more. Larger discounts are available to bookstores.

Printed Catalog & Web Site: Our printed catalog offers many of our newly acquired titles, while our web site contains much of the cataloged inventory that does not appear in the most recent printed catalog. We invite you to examine each of these inventory lists – the printed catalog because it offers the most recent acquisitions, and the web site because of its more extensive listing of approximately 5,000 titles.

Visit the PCP, Inc. Internet web site at www.pcpbooks.net for our inventory of approximately 5,000 titles.

The harm that comes to souls from the lack of reading holy books makes me shudder... What power spiritual reading has to lead to a change of course, and to make even worldly people enter into the way of perfection.

Comments on the Catholic Bibliographical Index

Dr. Barbara Berfanger, Ed.D., Former President, St. Mary's College, Kansas

Recently I learned about the release of the Catholic Bibliographical Index by Preserving Christian Publications. My experience in research and in teaching led me to recognize quickly and without doubt that this Index offers an immense, rich resource about works by Catholic authors.

The Index is easy to navigate. Once the user gets started, he can browse by category or search the entire database. The works are listed in a wide range of categories, and the titles are numbered within each category. This feature can keep the searcher on track and save him from getting lost in a long list. The listed titles, most with brief annotations, are clear, well-spaced, and easy to read. Bold-faced headings attract reader's attention to essential publication information.

Anyone searching for references to Catholic authors can find the Index beneficial. It can be helpful to the teacher who wants to compile a reading list to aid students following his or her courses. Secondary and college instructors will find the Index indispensable in guiding students in traditional methods of using an index as an early step in composing a research paper. By being directed to worthwhile works to consider, students can gain skill and will likely discover and appreciate some of the treasures that Catholics have inherited. The Index can yield satisfying rewards to advanced scholars and even to general readers who are pursuing specific searches.

It is a pleasure to give a hearty welcome and endorsement to this gold-mine of information.

Pope Leo XIII and the Prayer to St. Michael:

An Historical and Theological Examination
by Kevin J. Symonds

Foreword by Bishop Athanasius Schneider

"Kevin J. Symonds' . . . Pope Leo XIII and the Prayer to St. Michael . . . I am most grateful to have a copy of the book which, as you note in your letter, is particularly timely."

Raymond Leo Cardinal Burke – letter to the publisher

"In his book Pope Leo XIII and the Prayer to St. Michael Mr. Kevin Symonds presents a very careful and competent historical research about the origin and the circumstances of the publication of the prayer to St. Michael. Furthermore he gives also a rich spiritual reflection on the Divine truth about the Holy Angels, the fallen angels and the reality and necessity of the spiritual battle. Mr. Symonds' book is indeed very relevant for our times. May this book become widespread and raise to many Catholics—especially the clergy—a new awareness of the necessity to use the spiritual means which God and His Church have given us in order to fight against the infiltration and attacks of the evil spirits."

– Bishop Athanasius Schneider – from the foreword

"With a great pleasure I received . . . Kevin Symonds' book Pope Leo XIII and the Prayer to St. Michael, a valuable study of the famous Leonine Prayer and also of the little Exorcism against Satan and the bad angels.

" . . . this work . . . illustrates the terrible power of Satan and his angels, and also the wonderful power of the Catholic Popes, when they follow the inspiration of Heaven and act with fortitude, mobilizing the Christian People with Saint Michael the Archangel and his holy armies against the Powers of Darkness."

Our Lady of Fatima and Russia – Part II

Introduction: Two Elements of a Single Prophecy

Behind the mistaken notion of a “fourth secret” of Fatima, there is the implied separation of two expressions used by Our Lady in the second part of the Secret: the “errors of Russia” on one hand, and the “dogma of the Faith” on the other. The “errors of Russia” are wrongly understood as representing merely a political phenomenon, while “dogma” is seen as a reference to purely Church-related considerations, and specifically to events involving the Second Vatican Council and the liturgical changes that followed it.

In reality, however, these two expressions of Our Lady manifest two aspects of a single prophecy involving both the Church and the world together. Our Lady’s reference to the dogma of the Faith mentioned a particular country, Portugal, and the errors of Russia refer to yet another country. Our Lady was not implying that Russia was the embodiment of all that is evil, while Portugal alone represented the Church’s resistance to this evil. Pope Leo XIII taught that “no people is altogether without worth” (Exeunte Jam Anno, Dec. 25, 1888). And Pope Pius XII referred to Russia as “an immense people...renowned in history...for piety toward God and the Virgin Mary” (Apostolic Letter Carissimis Russiae Populis, July 7, 1952). What Our Lady was indicating, rather, was that all nations do not play identical roles in fulfilling Our Lord’s command to His Apostles, to preach the Gospel to all nations. Therefore, to understand the message of Fatima, we must reflect on what Our Lady was revealing about the history of the Church in the modern world.

The Spiritual and the Temporal Orders

Possibly the very first public launching of the theory later called the “fourth secret” was a monthly circular letter of the controversial Bishop Richard Williamson, formerly a member of the Society of St. Pius X, but now acting independently of that priestly society. Writing on July 4, 2000, from the German seminary where Bishop Williamson gave his provocative interview about Nazi Germany eight years later, he used the argument that the Secret was written on a single sheet of paper, whereas the published text was a different document because it had four separate pages – an argument that was disproved when Cardinal Bertone appeared on Italian television in May of 2007 showing the original text, a single folded sheet with four sides.

Underlying Bishop Williamson’s argument, however, was the assumption that the Secret had to speak specifically about the present crisis in the Church. What Our Lady revealed in the Secret, however, concerned the Church and society together, or the nations of the world, because it is in human society itself that the Church fulfills her mission as she labors to convert the nations. In the Third Secret Vision the Church is under attack. Why is the Church opposed, and in what manner have governments turned against her?

In the Catholic society of medieval Europe, Church and State were firmly united, with the Church increasingly gaining respect as her authority within society was more and more recognized in society’s laws and in its institutions. This harmony between the Church and the State was later challenged by Protestantism in the sixteenth century, with the Holy Roman Empire in Germany becoming divided by the Lutheran revolt, with England becoming officially Protestant, and with France’s unity being threatened by Protestant minorities. Spain and Portugal, on the other hand, preserved their Catholic unity, and after the discovery of America a new development was taking place in the relationship between the Church and temporal society. When English colonies in North America declared their independence, Catholics in the state of Maryland supported their new nation because it provided them with religious freedom denied to them by the Protestant Church of England.

This historical move toward independence among the nations of the Americas has been interpreted in a purely negative manner by the previously mentioned Bishop Williamson, who sees it as a work of Freemasonry. The secret societies, however, were not active merely in North America, but also in the mother countries of Europe. It was the French Revolution, not the American war of independence, that brought persecution of the Church. The Napoleonic wars that immediately followed led to the invasion of the Iberian Peninsula by Napoleon, and as a result the royal family of Portugal went to Brazil. When the royal family returned to Portugal in 1821, the son of the king of Portugal remained in Brazil as Pedro I, the first of two emperors of Brazil, making Brazil itself an independent nation, under a monarchy from 1822 until 1889. In the meantime when the Spanish colonies in the New World claimed their independence from Spain, the Holy See, working through the papal nunciature in Rio de Janeiro – since Brazil had led the way as a South American nation in being recognized by Rome – gradually established diplomatic ties with the new Spanish American countries.

Freedom and Authority

The move toward independence on the part of new nations cannot be reduced to a simple formula, for circumstances vary in different parts of the world. But a central question in all the modern political debate concerned the relationship between authority and freedom. Juan Donoso Cortés showed in Catholicism, Liberalism and Socialism that the proper equilibrium between freedom and authority can only be provided by Catholic dogma.** During the Second World War the totalitarian regimes of Communism, Nazism and Fascism, representing the ultimate abuse of government authority, have been seen in contrast with secular western democracies, viewed at times as embodiments of false liberty or libertarianism. However, the errors of Russia referred to by Our Lady of Fatima were manifested most aggressively in the totalitarian regimes. During World War II, as in the First World War that preceded it, Europe became an immense battlefield – and France, Eldest Daughter of the Church, was invaded by the totalitarian forces of Nazism. During this time, in 1942, a Eucharistic Congress was held in Brazil, and Plinio Corrêa de Oliveira, as a leader of Catholic Action in the country, was called upon to speak to those attending. In his address he recalled the famous adage which states that God works through the French – Gesta Dei per francos. He then added that if Brazil lived up to its role as a Catholic country, it would come to be said also of that nation: Gesta Dei per brasilienses. He himself measured up to that role in his 1943 book on Catholic Action, when he wrote that while “liberalism was an evil,” it is also true that “totalitarianism is a catastrophe.”*** He was calling attention to the fact that the Communist errors in Russia, and with them Nazism and Fascism, represented the central threat that was menacing the contemporary world and ultimately the Church herself, and that totalitarianism is never the answer to a false concept of liberty, known as liberalism.

The Errors of Russia: Caesaropapism

The temptation today, seven decades later, is one of assuming that after the political collapse of the Soviet Union, the errors of Russia are now a phenomenon of the past. To reach such a conclusion is to ignore history, and above all it is to ignore the implications of the message of Fatima. Russia posed a problem for Christendom because historically it aligned itself with the Greek Orthodox schism and therefore joined in the separation from Rome. This had consequences for Russia not only religiously, but also socially and politically. The Orthodox never completely abandoned the pagan Roman ideal of State superiority over religion and the Church. Religious and political developments in Western Europe, on the other hand, increasingly developed a more profound doctrinal and legal definition of the respective roles of Church and State, and of the rights and duties of the faithful as members of both spiritual and civil society. The West gradually replaced purely Roman and tribal laws with statutes and customs that manifested more profoundly the principles of ecclesiastical and civil law guided by the Catholic Church.

In both Western Europe and its colonies, Catholic principles of international law continued to be articulated by the Church’s theologians, when the discovery of new lands raised questions about pagan nations and how they were to be treated in anticipation of their conversion, how relations between the European nations themselves were to be governed, and how the Church was to carry on relations with governments having non-Catholic populations that did not recognize the authority of Rome.

Russia was involved only as an outsider to these developments, led by a legal tradition different from that of the West – one lacking a full recognition of the Church as having an authority higher than that of the State, and not having the West’s understanding of the relationship between authority and freedom within civil society itself. There were times when Russia could join forces with the West, such as in the defense of legitimate authority after the Revolution in France had overthrown the monarchy. But its role could never be fully receptive to Catholic influences over society, since it did not recognize the authority of the Catholic Church, nor give full freedom to the practice of the Faith by members of the Church.

The Church, Russia and Western Nations

Whereas Russia had separated from the Catholic Church by its identification with the Eastern schism, the revival of ancient culture during the Renaissance became the occasion for governments in the West to challenge the Church’s authority through the gradual secularization of its political institutions. However, in the face of this revolt, the laws and institutions that the Church’s influence had brought to Western societies left the Church as a force within society that not even governments could fully overpower. The Church summoned and mobilized a militant Catholic laity, under the guidance of the popes and the hierarchy, that allowed the Church to influence Western nations even in the face of persecutions.

The form that this took with the rise of totalitarian governments was mentioned in the previous article. The popes called it Catholic Action, to distinguish it from the term previously used, action of Catholics, insofar as it was not merely the private initiative of Catholic laity, nor even the organization of Catholic political parties, but the action of the laity in union with the hierarchy – working at times outside the strictly political realm, but influencing politics according to the guiding principle of Pope St. Pius X, that of restoring all things in Christ.

Something changed, however, in the 1960s, the decade of the Second Vatican Council. Lay Italian Church historian Roberto de Mattei points out in his history of the Council that from 1963 to 1979 enrollment in Catholic Action in Italy declined from 3,600,000 to a mere eight hundred thousand. Catholics not only in Italy but throughout the world ceased to be as organized under the hierarchy as they had been in previous decades. How and why did this come about?

In the previous article we mentioned the case of Catholic politicians who depart from Catholic teaching in their political offices, and the failure of many bishops to follow the example of Raymond Cardinal Burke, who continually insisted that such politicians cannot receive Communion as long as they persist in ignoring Catholic teaching. This has prompted many of the laity to ask why the bishops are not providing appropriate moral leadership. A recent article by the associate editor of Our Sunday Visitor, Msgr. Owen F. Campion, blames Catholics in general – implying thereby the laity – by arguing that it is they who elect dissident Catholic politicians. However, it is the bishops who were given the mandate by Our Lord to teach, govern and sanctify the faithful. If certain Catholic politicians violate Catholic teaching in public office, and if it is the laity who vote them into office, it is members of the hierarchy who have allowed this to happen and even encouraged it, when they permit such politicians to receive Communion while not adhering to Catholic teaching. Such bishops fail to uphold the “dogma of the Faith” mentioned by Our Lady of Fatima, thereby allowing the errors of Russia to spread, and the Faith itself, which Our Lady promised would be preserved in Portugal, to be compromised throughout many nations of the world.

Excerpt from Chapter Seven on the alliance between Communism, Nazism and Fascism

Since 1932 the Communist Party had publicized itself as the leading opponent of fascism. It had used the emotional appeal of anti-fascism to bring many people to the acceptance of communism, by posing communism and fascism as alternatives. Its propaganda machine ground out an endless stream of words, pictures, and cartoons. It played on intellectual, humanitarian, racial, and religious sensibilities until it succeeded to an amazing degree in conditioning America to recoil at the word fascist even when people did not know its meaning.

Today I marvel that the world communist movement was able to beat the drums against Germany and never once betray what the inner group knew well: that some of the same forces which gave Hitler his start had also started Lenin and his staff of revolutionists from Switzerland to St. Petersburg to begin the revolution which was to result in the Soviet totalitarian state.

There was not a hint that despite the propaganda of hate unleashed against Germany and Italy, communist representatives were meeting behind the scenes to do business with Italian and German fascists to whom they sold matériel and oil. There was not a hint that the Soviet brass was meeting with German brass to redraw the map of Europe. There was no betrayal of these facts until one day they met openly to sign a contract for a new map of Europe – a treaty made by Molotov and Von Ribbentrop [pp. 86-87].
